JOE JEFFERSON.

His Quaint Humor at a' Dinner in His Honer.

'TALKED SHOP" TO LOTOS CLUB

Record of Experiences-How Lincoln Interested Pimself in His Behalf-Terrific Sword Combat when Seven Years Old. Hissed from the Stage-Sixty Years as am Actor:

NEW YORK, April 7.-The Lotos Club, 300 strong, dined Joseph Jefferson last evening, and in return for the honor done him the veteran actor "talked shop," to use his own expres-sion, and talked it so delightfully that he was forced to raise an appealing hand again and again to quiet the storm of laughter and applause which his words caused.

It was the merriest kind of a dinner throughout, but try as they would the members who interjected and the mem-bers who made addresses were scarcely equal to the witty pace Mr. Jefferson set for them after he had been intro-duced.

set for then after its and duced.

President Cleveland, in reply to an invitation, wrote a letter, in which he expressed heartfelt regret that his engagements in Washington prevented him from joining in the tribute to his warm personal friend, Joseph Jefferson. Whitelaw Reid sent a telegram from Phoenix, Aria, expressing similar sentiments.

from Phoenix, Aria, expressing similar sentiments.

The lees reached the tables in miniature busts of Mr. Jefferson. The menu cards bore pictures of the actor in his most famous characters. These cards Mr. Jefferson decorated with his autor tamous characters. These cards Mr. Jefferson decorated with his autorapph until he could write no longer. They were highly prized.

President Lawrence, in introducing the actor, said, among other things:

"It is a pleasure to come home after a week's absence and find that until May, at least, it is safe for us to live together under our own roof."

Of Mr. Jefferson he said: "Gentlemen, we greet Joseph Jefferson, the actor, we greet Joseph Jefferson, the stainless, admirable, kindly man. I know of no man who typides as he does the spirit of the Lotos Club. It is my pleasure to ask you to rise and drink his health." Mr. Jefferson's Address.

A billow of champagne rose and vanished. Then the veteran actor, with a smile struggling in the corners of his mouth, found his cue in Mr. Lawrence's references to his stainless character. He stilled the wild applause which greeted him with one upraised hand,

He stilled the wild applause which greeted him with one upraised hand, and began:

"If a theatrical sudience could applaud like that," he said, "how much better the acting would be. While I may have had some floating idea that my professional services may have been appreciated, I had no idea that I was so good a man until your president said those words. It is almost embarrassing to be so respectable.

"If I recollect aright, the lawyer in The School for Scandal." upon being detected in a good act, asks that it be kept quiet. Sir Peter Teasle says, Zounds, man, are you ashamed of 12? And the lawyer replies, No, but I live by the badness of my reputation, and if this got abroad it would ruin me. So, I entrest you, don't repeat what has been said of me here by your president. If I don't do some desperate act soon my friends will suspect me. "It will surprise you, perhaps, to learn that my first appearance in public was nearly sixty years ago. I find by consulting a history of the stage that in 1877 Master Jöseph Jefferson—I take it that was myself—then seven or eight years oid, appeared at a benefit tendered Master Titus, who was ten, in the Franklin theatre. We were announced to appear in a terrific broadsword combat. I was dressed as a Spanish pirate. I may say it is surprising when I look back on it that the inhabitants permit-bat. I was dressed as a Spanish pirate. I may say it is surprising when I look back on it that the inhabitants permitted such a savage spectacle. But—to resume—he was dressed as an American citizen, and, naturally, I was to be overcome by him. I have no political feeling in this matter, purely professional, I assure you."

Here the rising laughter forced Mr. Jefferson to stop. His hands had begun to move unconsclously. His facial expression was irresistibly humorous. He raised his hand for silence and went on:

on:
"As he put his boot on my chest and waved the Star Spangled Banner, and the curtain came down, it is tradition that I came near cutting off the big toe of little Titus.

A Witty Allusion.

"But this is talking shop. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes said to me once that a man should always talk shop. He addman should always task shop. He added that he didn't care to take medicine, but that he liked immensely to give it. It was he who talked shop to a lot of doctors when he was young, and said their president was so wonderfully like his father that he could trace the 'liniusents' of his father in his face. Well, I talk shop to you. It is the only thing I know.

"Well, after that contest, as I was saying, I find myself out west with my father, a wandering manager, after walking between towns, and not for exercise, I assure you. In Springfield, Ill., there was a religious revival in progress and a prohibitive license was demanded of us.

"A lawyer came forward, interested himself, charged nothing for his services, and by evercising his talents and his humor succeeded in having the exaction of a license done away with. Afterward he moved into a great place in the affairs of this nation. He now lies buried near Springfield, beneath a monument recording the life and virtues of Abraham Lincoin.

"Then I find myself in New Orleans on some patriolic occasion. The manager, half-patriotic, half-commercial, arranged that "The Star Spangled Banner' be sung by the entire company. I was young then and had a fairly good voice. I used to lead the chorus. Where I led them to I haven't the remotest idea. Well, I was to sing the first verse. I had studied it till I knew it backwards, and Punafraid that's the way I sang it. My poor mother, expecting great things of her son, was in the wings. I was blind with nervousness.
"I etaggered forward and sans, 'Oh.

"I staggered forward and sang, 'Oh, say, can you see—' and there I stuck. I began it again, 'Oh, say, can you see—' and was stuck again. I don't know if they could see. I couldn't, anyway. I hope you will never be hissed off the stage. I was, regularly, on that occasion. The mannger, a German, kept saying, 'Go on, Yoe,' do on, Yoe, 'but 'Yoe' couldn't do it. I fluns myself on my mother's neck, and we cried it out together.

"I believe I am fairly patriotic, but on that occasion I cursed our national anthem up and down."

Continuing, Mr. Jefferson told how he and "Billy" Florence, when they were to appear together for the last time, reheared speeches, at Florence's suggestion, to be ready in case they were called before the curtain.

"He was to say something," said Mr. Jefferson, "and I was to reply with surprise on my face. The curtain wendown, the actors were in the wings ready to hear us—and the audience didn't call us out at all. You see how important preparation is on those occasions."

In conclusion he said he should never forset the honor done him by the club.

important preparation is on those occasions."

In conclusion he said he should never forget the honor done him by the club. He was cheered to the echo.

Bronson Howard, who followed, referred to Mr. Jefferson as "our greatest living actor." Speeches were made by John A. Taylor, the Rev. Dr. Van Wyck, Captain Henry White, Parke Gorwin, Simeon Ford and Stewart L. Woodford. Mr. Taylor said in part: "And so to-night, sitting down at meat with your friends, 'Joe Jefferson,' and above the welcome music of their words of praise, above the swelling chorns of their loud applause, we are all ready to believe that you can gladly understand that the thing there is about you which we do most of all admire and love is not the consummate skill and art, with which you have with such surpassing success so fashioned the contraints which you have given us skill and art, with which you have with such surpassing success so fashloned the portraits which you have given us behind the footlights, but that everywhere and all the time through your public career of half a century you have depicted no human quality of mind and heart which could for a noment compare with what we knew you all the time yourself to be, a man of men, a prince of good fellows, a loving husband, a noble citizen and a true friend."

The feature of the share speculation to-day was the fact that the general list proved superior to pronounced weakness in American Tobacco The stock mentioned even reduced to full shares, surpassed any of the list in extent of the trading and scored an exceptional loss of 4½ per cent, closing at the lowest of the day. This development was regarded generally in stock exchange circles with a feeling akin to satisfaction as demonstrating that the conspirators in the stock had overshot their mark, and were now the victims of their own machinations. The break on this account was variously explained. One report was that the traders detecting attempts on the part of insiders to unload, had taken away the market. The decline was also attendon this account was various; explained. One report was that the traders detecting attempts on the part of insiders to unload, had taken away the market. The decline was also attended by unconfirmed rumors of injunction proceedings to restrain the payment of the 20 per cent scrip dividend, and it was finally stated that a meeting of the authorities of the stock exchange had been called to investigate the methods of the management of the American Tobacco Company. The last report was denied by an officer of the exchange, influence upon the general market were of a negatively favorable character. It was expected that the decisive vote in the house in favor of the recognition of the Cubans as belligerents would be marked in the resumption of business on the London stock exchange after the Easter holidays, by heavy selling of American securities in that market London cables, however, previous to the opening of the local exchange reported only trifling changes in American rails in either direction.

Consequently the opening dealings here were characterized by a firmer undertone. Other favorable factors were the non-engagement of gold for shipment, despite the continued strength of exchange, a reported increase in the disposition on the part of bankers to purchase commercial paper and the continued case in money. The initial prices, while irregular, displayed an improving tendency and important fractional gains occurred. The selling movement was exhausted before mid-day and most of the early declines were recovered. The market closed firm, with tractional gains general.

Honds were rather dull and without changes of consequence, although the tone was firm. The transactions amounted to $44,900.

Governments were steady on sales of
